These meetings provided an opportunity to present the project to the tutors, who will be experimenting with the online resource space to enhance their skills.

A SURVEY OF TUTORS

A field survey was carried out in the two project countries: 80 questionnaires filled in by the tutors and 14 political and institutional players interviewed to highlight the main elements on which the tutors rely to support the young people. Based on this study, a reference framework of skills was drawn up for tutors supporting young people in exile.

A SKILLS FRAMEWORK FOR TUTORS

The tutors helped to draw up the reference framework. A tool for making their skills clear, it highlights four key skills on which the tutoring function is based to support young adults in exile. It includes taking into account the migratory journey, any traumas that may have occurred, and the challenges associated with inclusion in a new territory.

PRESENTATION OF THE PROJECT TO THE UNIVERSITY OF ORADEA (ROMANIA)

Marin Gherman presented the initial results of the RENT project at a workshop on "The internationalisation of universities in Romania and good practice", held at the University of Oradea. The participants expressed their interest in improving the clarity and quality of support for young adults in exile in a region where migratory flows are high. Read the related article here

WHEN EXILE RHYMES WITH WRITING

Álvaro Alcázar (doctoral student in literature at Sorbonne University - Hispanic and Romance linguistics and translation) invites us to explore the rich and diverse field that emerges from experiences of uprooting, forced migration, and often political or cultural exile. This literature bears witness to challenges, pain and hope. ....To find out more click here
